I was born and raised in Anchorage, Alaska. I left the state to attend college at the University of Puget Sound in Tacoma, WA, where I received my bachelor's degree in business. While exploring different career paths after college, I decided law was the right fit, so I attended law school at Mitchell Hamline College of Law in St. Paul, MN.

Following law school, I returned home and spent two years clerking in the Anchorage Superior Court. Upon completing my clerkship, I began working at the Anchorage District Attorney's Office. In 2021, I transitioned to the Office of Special Prosecutions where I primarily prosecute drug trafficking cases.

I take pride in being a lifelong Alaskan. It is important to me to have a career where I am giving back to our community. If appointed, it would be an honor to continue serving Alaskans.
