Name: David Wilkinson

Position(s): Anchorage Superior Court

Date: February 6, 2026

I am a lifelong Alaskan, born and raised in Anchorage.

I studied chemistry at the University of Alaska Fairbanks and attended law school at Seattle University. I planned to return to Alaska after law school to work in public service.

I clerked for Justice Daniel Winfree at the Alaska Supreme Court in Fairbanks. I then worked at the Department of Law, first in the Fairbanks office handling civil appeals and advising state agencies on complex legal issues, and then in the Anchorage office working on environmental enforcement cases. I briefly left state employment to work at a private firm in Anchorage. I then returned to the Department of Law, where I currently handle civil appellate litigation and work alongside trial-level teams in state and federal court.

Outside of work, I enjoy spending time with my wife and three children, hiking, cooking, reading, and learning new hobbies.
